Design in Bloom Event Sponsor Spotlight:

DECORATIVE MATERIALS

Modern in Denver's signature spring event, Design in Bloom, is right around the corner. The success of this event, now in its seventh year, is thanks in large part to our participating architects and designers who've created everything from ice-encapsulated flowers to intricate wooden sculptures though the years.

But we couldn't pull the event off without the generosity of our sponsors. Over the last few days, we've been thanking them individually and letting our readers know more about them.

Next up of our featured sponsors is Decorative Materials.

Decorative Materials is known for balancing timeless designs with the latest tile trends. The industry is constantly evolving, and Decorative Materials remains at the forefront of those changes.

With showrooms in Denver, Basalt, Vail and Telluride, Decorative Materials is a Colorado company through and through. But when it comes to their products, the geographical reach gets a whole lot bigger. In fact, the company is passionate about finding inspiration all over the world, so team members travel around the U.S. and throughout the world — including frequent trips to Italy, where some of the industry’s most innovative trends begin. These excursions bring international aesthetics back to Colorado to be used in a way that feels authentic to local homeowners and designers.

It’s not just beautiful tile that Decorative Materials brings to the table, though — their customer service and showrooms are one-of-a-kind in their industry. “We get that it can be tough to envision how products will look when actually installed. It can be difficult to take a risk with unique patterns if you’re not sure where or under what circumstances they can be most effectively incorporated,” says Denver showroom manager Michele Baum. “Hence, our dedication to putting a variety of designs on display in our showrooms.”

Baum notes that all Decorative Material showrooms have an impressive array of looks that are “brought to life” within the spaces. “Whether you’re looking to make a splash with a bold geometric concept or keep it simple, our showrooms are your opportunity to be both dazzled and inspired by some of today’s most beautiful tile designs. One trip to our showroom, and you’ll feel ready to take on today’s most ambitious, yet accessible looks.”

And, if you can’t get to the showroom right away, Decorative Materials’ website is a regularly updated resource rich in relevant information. The company maintains an up-to-date company blog on trends, client profiles and other company news that also serves as a great inspirational jumping off point. The site also features “free resources” and “inspiration” sections that are just another extension of Decorative Materials commitment to helping their customers make the most of their tile and stone projects.
